

After careful review, I really think this is a very bad idea. The FCC does not even have the resources to properly oversee and enforce existing radio emissions, let alone this beast. It has a very real potential of causing significant RFI, disrupting critical and legitimate radio traffic. And no, I am NOT an Ham operator or involved in the radio business. I am a qualified Electronics Technician, trained by the US Navy.